This paper is intended as a supplement to NACHC's April 2013 issue brief, Navigating the Health Insurance Marketplace: Community Health Centers and Consumer Assistance Programs, which explains, in greater depth, the three types of marketplace consumer application and enrollment assistance programs created in federal law:

- Navigators (who must meet the lengthy and detailed standards set forth in 45 C.F.R. §155.210 and §155.215);
- Non-Navigator assistance personnel (also referred to as In-Person Assisters) who likewise are subject to the extensive requirements applicable to Navigators; and
- Consumer assistance counselors (CACs), who are subject to more limited standards set forth in 45 C.F.R. §155.225.

As health centers and Primary Care Associations (PCAs) decide whether or not to apply for Navigator grants, to become non-navigator assistance personnel or Consumer Application Counselors, there are a few new and developing issues to consider. These considerations, while not exhaustive, are discussed below. Because of the evolving nature of public policy surrounding health insurance marketplace operations, including their consumer assistance functions, every health center and PCA will have to make their own determination as to which type of assister program is right for them, based on what we know from federal regulations and how their individual states choose to regulate these entities. What is clear is that health centers will play a central role in assisting newly eligible individuals with the application and enrollment process.

Further Guidance on Certified Application Counselors

On July 17, 2013 a final federal rule was released and the Preamble made clear the requirements for becoming a CAC are much less stringent than for Navigators and non-navigator personnel. For example, the Preamble states that Navigators (and non-navigator personnel) cannot be issuers or issuer subsidiaries or receive compensation from an issuer. As expected, this strongly indicates that health centers that are owners of health center-owned plans could not be Navigators. However, this prohibition does not apply to CACs, who instead, simply must disclose any conflicts. Navigators and non-Navigator assistance personnel also must meet explicit conflict of interest, training, and accessibility standards. The standards for consumer assistance counselors – as well as their duties and their ongoing training obligations -- are more limited, as summarized in Appendix A.

State Regulation of Navigators

The final federal rule recognizes the authority of states to regulate Navigators\(^4\), regardless of what type of marketplace is operating in the state (FFE, State Partnership or State Based), as long as the standards are not in conflict with the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Because the Navigator program is part of a federal law, its terms are preemptive, and state laws that prevent the federal program from achieving its purpose would be superseded. In other words, if a state passes legislation or otherwise imposes regulation that in any way prevents Navigators from fulfilling their duties under the ACA, the state law would arguably be invalid. While the ACA is silent on whether states can regulate non-Navigator personnel and CACs, this does not mean that states cannot regulate these entities. Federal preemption would similarly apply in such cases.

A review was conducted\(^5\) of state Navigator laws (see Appendix B) and identified 9 states whose Navigator bills explicitly include broad language differentiating their definitions from that found in the final federal rule. Such discrepancies may be of concern to health centers (and to PCAs as well), because of their potential to apply to outreach and enrollment efforts by non-Navigators. State agencies in charge of implementing these laws may expand on the underlying legislative intent regarding their reach.

Of the nine state bills that appear to extend their definition of a Navigator beyond the federal definition, five have been signed into law (Georgia, Indiana, Maryland, Missouri, and Utah), and four are pending in the legislature (Arkansas, Idaho, Louisiana, New Mexico). Examples of legislative language that may go beyond the scope of the Navigator Final Rule are as follows:

- Georgia’s HB 198, which defines a navigator as “an individual, including assistors, application counselors, or other persons, authorized pursuant to the Federal Act.”
- Idaho’s HB 433, which defines a navigator as “a person who assists with eligibility, enrollment, program specifications and public education activities related to the exchange.”
- Louisiana’s HB 614, which defines a navigator as someone who “could reasonably be described or designated as a navigator, in-person assister, enrollment assister, application assister, or application counselor.”
- Utah’s HB 160 broadly defines a navigator, but includes an exemption for Federally Qualified Health Centers.

Existing Health Center Outreach and Enrollment Efforts

As part of their 330 program requirements, health centers conduct outreach activities and assist individuals in gaining health coverage. While it is concerning that some state legislation may be written so broadly as to capture these activities in their definitions of what constitutes a Navigator for purposes of licensure and regulation, federal preemption should apply in these cases. It is unclear, however, how or whether the federal government can prevent any of these laws from taking hold.

Since the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) announced $150 million in grants to health centers\(^6\) to conduct outreach and enrollment activities on July 10, 2013, questions have arisen with regard to how the grant requirements intersect with any efforts undertaken as a Navigator, non-navigator assister or CAC, should a health center choose to become one of these in the future, and specifically, how states’ definition of Navigators may impact health centers who have accepted the HRSA grants. Again, these concerns will likely vary state to state depending on how Navigators are regulated. HRSA has stated that health centers in Federally-Facilitated Marketplace (FFM) and State Partnership Marketplace (SPM) states receiving outreach and enrollment supplemental funds from BPHC must apply to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) to become CAC organizations in order to certify appropriate health center staff and volunteers as CACs\(^7\). This requirement does not seem to apply to health centers in states that have opted to run their own State-Based Exchange, however, those states may impose a similar requirement.

Key Points to Consider

- Health centers and PCAs must make their own determinations, based on their circumstances and individual state regulations, about whether or not to apply to become Navigators.
- The final federal rule acknowledges a role for states in regulating Navigators; while no such acknowledgement has been made with regard to non-navigator personnel or CACs, this does not mean that states cannot regulate these entities.
- PCAs and Health Centers must be aware of how their state is regulating or considering regulating Navigators. Navigators in all types of marketplaces (Federally Facilitated, State Partnership and State-Based) are subject to state regulation.
- Federal law governing the Navigator Program is preemptive, meaning it supersedes any state law that infringes on its intent. State laws concerning Navigators must not impede them from fulfilling their duties as outlined in the ACA.
- Some state laws concerning Navigators include broad definitions of Navigators that may impact health centers conducting outreach and enrollment assistance, even if not as Navigators.
- Requirements for CACs are less stringent than those for Navigators and non-navigator personnel
- If accepting HRSA outreach and enrollment grants, health centers in a Federally Facilitated or State Partnership marketplace, must register as a CAC with CMS.
- Health Centers in a state that has opted to run a State-Based Exchange must find out from your state how CACs will be designated.
