

National Association of Community Health Centers
CONFERENCE
 FOR AGRICULTURAL WORKER HEALTH
 2017
 formerly known as the National Farmworker Health Conference

MAY 22-24, 2017
 SAVANNAH MARRIOTT RIVERFRONT
 SAVANNAH, GEORGIA

The National Conference for Agricultural Workers Health (formerly known as The National Farmworker Health Conference) is the only conference dedicated solely to the health and well-being of America's migratory and seasonal agricultural workers. Community and Migrant Health Centers currently serve over 900,000 migratory and seasonal agricultural workers and their families. However, this represents approximately 20% of the estimated number who reside in the country. We must do better, we can and we are!

The National Association of Community Health Centers in collaboration with the National Center for Farmworker Health (NCFH), Community and Migrant Health Centers, State and Regional Primary Care Associations, the Farmworker Health Network and other key stakeholders launched AG Worker Access 2020 Campaign in May 2015 with the goal of serving 2 million patients by the year 2020! The campaign calls on all migrant health centers nationwide to increase the number of new farmworker patients served by 15% each year for the next five years. If we are successful, we will reach 2 million patients by the year 2020! The AG Worker Access 2020 Campaign Task Force is confident that working collectively with all key stakeholders, we will reach our goal and improve access to our nation's agricultural workers and their families.

PCAs, health center controlled networks and health centers all across the country have enthusiastically embraced the campaign by developing more specific community outreach strategies and effective utilization of community health workers and promotoras(es) to reach the population. Train-the-Trainer program curricula has been developed by NCFH and front desk staff are being trained to more accurately identify who is a "migratory" or "seasonal" agricultural worker and family member during the patient intake process resulting in more accurate reporting in the UDS reporting system.

Come and join us in beautiful Savannah, GA May 22-24, 2017 to learn more about effective strategies, tools and models that have been implemented and how you can make a difference in your organization. You will learn more about what progress has been made, share effective strategies designed to reach this population and network with your colleagues who have dedicated their career to serving America's migratory and seasonal agricultural population. With increased attendance to more than 260 attendees last year, the 2017 Conference for AG Worker Health will be even better – focusing on innovative models of serving mobile populations, health center operational excellence, efforts to increase health insurance coverage and efforts to serve those who have been left out of the ACA, and more. A limited number of conference sponsorships and tabletop exhibits are available.
