Welcome to Chicago and the annual 2022 Community Health Institute (CHI) & EXPO of the National Association of Community Health Centers (NACHC)!

Our Focus is the Future. We hold great responsibility for the well-being of the patients and communities we serve. Today as we assemble to assess our progress and begin a new NACHC year, we resolve to strengthen leadership as we continue advancing the health center mission – and to foster social change and reforms to address injustice and inequities in the nation’s health care system.

We have come through a traumatic time. As providers of care, we have faced the harsh impact of COVID across the nation, especially in our most marginalized communities. We have witnessed the devastating impact of violence, racism, and hatred that pervades daily life. By virtue of all that we have experienced, we hold firmly to the belief that community health centers are vital to America’s future and that investment in a strong community-based system of primary care is needed to improve conditions and build healthier lives and futures.

This past year, guided by strategic goals set by our NACHC membership, major strides have been made to position health centers for a larger role in the nation’s health care system. On the home front, we have kept pace with COVID and its variants while strengthening capacity to meet growing needs in our communities. At state and national levels, we have amplified our collective voice on issues and policies that impact our centers and the health of our patients. At the same time, we have undertaken a large-scale assessment of what will be needed in terms of leadership, innovation, resources, and workforce to sustain health center growth and competitiveness. Importantly, we have rallied to build a stronger NACHC of the Future reaffirming our commitment to stand united and to expand diversity, equity, and inclusion throughout our organization.

As a result of our collective efforts and the valued work of NACHC staff – progress has been made on many fronts. Our goal now is to build on the trust and public support we have earned for our programs and meet the future with confidence. During the next few days of this conference, we will have the opportunity to network, learn, and gain insight from Administration officials, colleagues, and special guests as we look to the challenges and opportunities ahead.

On behalf of the NACHC Board and Officers, let me express our appreciation for your dedicated work and ongoing support of NACHC through your membership and engaged participation. Also, special thanks to State/Regional Primary Care Associations and Health Center Controlled Networks, and our many partners, lawmakers, advocates, and community stakeholders who share the vision of a healthier future for America.

Harriet A. Washington, MA, Award-Winning Medical Writer and Editor

Harriet A. Washington is a science writer, editor, and ethicist who is the author of Carte Blanche: The Erosion of Informed Consent in Medical Research (2021, Columbia Global Reports) and A Terrible Thing to Waste: Environmental Racism and Its Assault on the American Mind. She has been a Writing Fellow in Bioethics at Harvard Medical School, the 2015-2016 Miriam Shearing Fellow at the University of Nevada's Black Mountain Institute, a Research Fellow in Medical Ethics at Harvard Medical School, a Visiting Fellow at the Harvard TH Chan School of Public Health, a visiting scholar at DePaul University College of Law, and a senior research scholar at the National Center for Bioethics at Tuskegee University. She has also held fellowships at Stanford University, and teaches bioethics at Columbia University, where she delivered the 2020 commencement speech to Columbia’s School of Public Health graduates, and won the 2020 Mailman School of Public Health’s Public Health Leadership Award, as well as the 2020-21 Kenneth and Mamie Clark Distinguished Lecture Award. In 2016, she was elected a Fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, and in 2021, the American Medical Writers Association gave her the Walter C. Alvarez Award.

Her work provided the basis for the AMA’s apology to the nation’s Black physicians in 2008 and led to the banishment of the James Marion Sims statue from Central Park in 2018.

Ms. Washington has written widely for popular magazines, newspapers, and science publications and has been published in peer-reviewed books and journals such as Nature, JAMA, The American Journal of Public Health, The New England Journal of Medicine, the Harvard Public Health Review, Isis, Medizin und Ethik in der Pandemie APuZ and The Journal of Law, Medicine, and Ethics. She has been editor of the Harvard Journal of Minority Public Health, a guest editor of the Journal of Law, Medicine and Ethics and is a reviewer for the Journal of the American Association of Bioethics and the Humanities.

Human-Centered Design: Engaging Key Stakeholders and Patients to Redesign a Mobile Clinic Using Telehealth for Infectious Diseases Among Rural Communities

This session will describe how human-centered design was utilized to conduct key stakeholder and patient interviews to fundamentally ask different questions about the things we come across every day, challenge assumptions, and gain insights to better design telehealth for infectious diseases (HIV, hepatitis C, sexually transmitted infections). Presenters will identify methodologies used to enable teams to see things through the eyes and hearts of those most affected who are utilizing mobile clinic services. They will also highlight the valuable role of a state health department in providing surveillance data to community partners to better understand the infectious disease challenges in that community. The ultimate aim of this work is to inform the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in providing support for telehealth activities and to gain new insights into how to improve screening and linkage to care for infectious diseases.
